

Mr Stephen Ozoigbo
ARM

Stephen Ozoigbo is the Senior Director for Emerging Economies at Arm.

He leads regional strategies around business development, technology, and ecosystem engagement activities across Arm's multiple lines of business in South America and Africa. He also supports Arm's Sustainability strategies across industry and partner networks, including government, education, and impact stakeholders within the emerging digital economies.

He has spent the last decade catalysing innovation, investment, and internationalisation activities within the African start-up ecosystems, and he previously served as a Foreign Direct Investment Manager for the Government of Catalonia, leading bilateral technology and innovation projects between Silicon Valley and Barcelona. He was responsible for the inaugural technology transfer partnership between the California Nano Systems Institute (CNSI) and the Nanosystems Institute of Catalonia (ICN), amongst other notable international technology partnerships.

Stephen has an MBA in Global Business from Pepperdine University and an Executive Certificate in Behavioral Finance and Investment from Harvard University.
